

Vantree Technologies — Expense Policy FAQ (Slack Export)

Document ID: FIN-FAQ-01 | Version 1.2 | Last updated: May 2026 | Owner: Finance Team

---

The following is an export of a pinned Q&A thread from the #finance-questions Slack channel, compiled by the Finance team as an informal supplement to the Expense Reimbursement Policy (Employee Handbook, Section 5). This document is for quick reference only — the Employee Handbook is the authoritative source in case of any discrepancy.

Priya Nair (Finance)

Quick FAQ since we keep getting the same questions in here — bookmarking this thread. Ask away and I'll add to the list below.

Priya Nair (Finance)

Q: Do I need a receipt for a $15 coffee with a client? A: Nope — anything under €25 doesn't need a receipt attached in Expensify, just log the amount and who you met with. Over €25, receipt is required, no exceptions.

Priya Nair (Finance)

Q: I forgot to submit a conference expense from 3 months ago, am I out of luck? A: Technically reports are supposed to go in within 60 days. After that it's manager discretion — so ask your manager directly, don't just submit it late and hope. Some managers are lenient, some aren't.

Marcus Oduya (Sales)

following up on that — my manager approved a late one for me last quarter, so it does happen, just flag it first

Priya Nair (Finance)

Q: Can I expense a bottle of wine at a client dinner? A: Yes, as long as it's part of an actual client entertainment event and alcohol doesn't go over 30% of the total meal bill. Solo dinner with wine while traveling = not reimbursable, that's on you.

Priya Nair (Finance)

Q: What's the per-person cap for client meals again? A: €80 per person. If you go over, either split it or expect the excess to come out of pocket — Expensify will flag it automatically.

Devon Achterberg (Eng)

does the €500 home office reimbursement reset every year or is it a one-time thing

Priya Nair (Finance)

Q: (Devon's question) Home office equipment — is €500 per year? A: No, it's €500 total, once every 3 years, per the Handbook. It's meant for a monitor/chair/desk setup, not an annual budget.